SKEICHES OF CONFEDERATE VEIERANS.

The following sketches are taken from the special edition of the Fairfax Herald published on the occasion of the Confederate reunion held at the Courthouse on the 11th and 12th instant:

COL ARTHUR HERBERT. (17 h Va. Iof., C. S. A.)

Atthough his locks have become whitened by the frosts of thirty-five winters since he gallantly led his superb regiment in battle, many old veterans recognize in Col. Arthur Herbert of today, the former commander of the 17th Va. Infantry. At the organization of the Old Dominion Rifles in Alexandria, December 6, 1860, M. D. Corse was elected captain, Arthur Herbert first lieutenant. In February. Herbert, first lieutenant. In February, 1861, Capt. Corse was made major, and Lieut. Herbert was promoted to the captaincy. The 17th regiment was organized June 10, 1861, and from that time until the close of the war was recognized as one of the best regiments in the service. April 26, 1862, M. D. Corse was elected colonel, Morton Marye lieutenant colonel, and Arthur Herbert, major. Subsequently, Corse was madea brigadier general, Morton Marye become colonel and Arthur Herpert lieutenant colonel of the regiment Col. Marye lost a leg at the second battle of Manassas, and active command of the regiment devolved thereafter upon Col. Herbert. Col. Marye, on account of physical disability, resigned in August, 1864, when Lieut.-Col. Herbert was promoted to the rank of colonel. He was a brave and skillful officer and was highly esteemed by his men. After the war Col. Herbert gaged in the banking business in Alexandria, as a member of the firm of Burke & Herbert, but retired from ac-tive business about a year or two ago. He represents the highest type of Virginia manhood-brave, chivalrous, genbonor and integrity. Co. D, 17th Va., Parlor Suits and was from Fairfax, although many from unty belonged to other compa nies of the regiment. The following is the muster roll of Co. D, as found in the "History of the Seventeenth Virginia Regiment" by Geo. Wise: COL. FRANCIS L. SMITH.

On a bright Sunday morning, May 15, 1864, more than thirty-six years ago, there appeared on the battlefield of New Market, Va, the Corps of Cadets from the Virginia Military Institution. Hither they had been called from Lexington at the command of Gen. Breck-euridge to sesist in driving back the Federal troops then advancing down the Valley of Virginia. Many miles had these young soldiers marched, when footsore and hungry they received their baptism of fire opon the bloody field of

In these far-off days, away from the clash of arms, it is well to recall the brilliant charge of these cadets upon this memorable occasion. History will dwell upon their heroic schievement and Virginia will ever point with satis faction to that band of beardless boys "marking time" under a destructive fire that rained like leaden hall upon their devoted ranks. Many fell to rise no more but the discipline was superb and when at last the order was given to "advance" the victory of the day was won by the sweeping onset of these brave young sons of the Old Dominion. "There is something of pride in the perilous

AN INVOICE OF FINE GUNPOWDER plane of intelligence honor and courtesy.

In earlier life, he was known by his older comrades as "The boy veterap;" now, he modestly wears the title of "The Nestor of the Alexandria Bar." As a young soldier in the ranks, as an officer in the volunteer service of the State, as a practitioner at the bar, and as a public spiried citizen, Col. Smith has displayed the highest and best traits of munhood. Such men as Col. Smith have made Virginia what she is, the most illustrious of the American Steep. can States. QUESTION ANSWERED.
